
Seller Center Homepage

Walmart 2022

A Bit of Background:

The Walmart Marketplace allows third-party sellers to list their items on Walmart.com. The Walmart Seller Center is the platform for sellers to manage and list their items. This landing page has the highest potential to drive awareness of the seller's lifecycle. However, the current Seller Center landing experience prevents sellers from maximizing their growth.

My Contribution:

I was the lead designer for this initiative. My responsibilities included conducting research, running workshops, presenting to design leadership and the APIS team (Business, Product, Design, Engineering), and delivering final specifications for production.

The Problem:

There is no homepage. Sellers are not welcomed into Seller Center; instead, they are dropped straight into the items page.

Our Solution:

Build a welcoming, valuable experience for sellers through their relationship with us - whether we're hearing from onboard during first visit or recommending services that grow w/o them.

The Impact:

Landing NPS score improved by 1200 bps 🎉

Increase program adoption rate

Segregating use cases by the seller's lifecycle

Sellers require different tasks, metrics, and interventions depending on their lifecycle stage. For example, a seller who has just onboarded to the Seller Center needs onboarding tasks, such as verifying their business, adding payments and shipping information in order to get paid, and shipping out their products to customers. While Walmart's perspective, we encourage newly onboarded sellers to list out as much items first, as we can promote the addition of items as the initial step.

As how seller engage with the Seller Center, their needs will evolve. I have been attempting to determine what the most important factors are at each stage of their lifecycle within the Seller Center.

SOLUTIONING

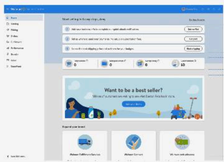
Visual exploration

After multiple rounds of low-fi exploration, I have come up with three different concepts of how Business metrics, To-dos, and promotional area.

User Journey

Amy's Lifecycle in Seller Center

Final solution



Onboard: Amy has just joined the Walmart marketplace and is entering the Seller Center for the first time. Now she needs to complete a 3-step onboarding checklist.

💡Design solution: Using to-dos (tasks) - Amy can clearly see what critical tasks need to be done at the moment!

Monitor: After completing the onboarding process, Amy can now go live. She starts getting sales and she quickly check her key business metrics to for a pulse check on her business.

💡Design solution: Amy has a high level view of her business. We currently display four business metrics: Today's orders, Total unshipped orders, Average ratings, and Current balance.

Manage: Amy uses the homepage on a daily basis to optimize her time and complete tasks such as shipping orders and adding inventory for out-of-stock items, among other tasks.

💡Design solution: Some to-dos are based on the content framework.

Grow: Amy is browsing value-added services on the homepage and was excited to adopt Walmart Fulfillment Services (WFS) to improve efficiency.

Content design framework

The Seller Center has a lot of content, and I have worked closely with content designers to determine which content needs to be included in the To-Dos section of the homepage. This has improved communication with cross-functional teams regarding the content.

Promotional banner lifecycle

I conducted a workshop with the product team to clarify the trigger points for each promotion. Additionally, I collaborated with content designers to create promo and banner design and content guidelines for creatives and teams.

IMPACT

Result and metrics

We have received a lot of positive feedback from sellers and improved the landing experience by 1200 basis points. The adoption rate of value-added services has also increased significantly for each service.
